No more important Edict than the one ordering the construction of the first great trunk railway in China has ever been signed with the vermilion pencil. The young Emperor Kwang Su, if he never performs the north, Kiangsi, and that last mouth a weianother act of state, will at least have rep- ween left with workmen and materials for the dered his reign memorable by the issue of purpose. We hear the telegraph now reaches to that Decree. Future generations of Chinese and that there is no feeling against it now will, we believe, date the era of progress existing in the province. from the appearance of the Railway Decree on the 27th August, 1889. It is true it will not be exactly the first railway in the Central Kingdom, because the Kniping-Tientsin line already exists and is in working order. But that live was first, made as a mineral railway to carry the produce of the Kaiping mines to a port of shipment, and was in no sense a state undertaking, being constructed and run by a private company. But this work. It is to be constructed for reasons of the people. The edict states that "the sovereign is of opinion that to make a country powerful railways are essential," which may be interpreted to mean that the railway is necessary as a means of quick transport for troops and munitions of war. SPOON COMPETITION AT 800 YARDS,

An agreeable change in the temperature caused a fair number of competitors to turn up for the spoon shoot on Saturday last, which was won by Mr. Ford with S9 points. P.C. D. McLeonan was only one point behind. Several scores were very creditable, considering that a fresh N.E. wind was blowing at the rate of 22 miles an hour atreas the range throughout the shooting.

A PROMISING KOREAN PORT

One of the most promising ports as yet un opened in the Far East is that of Ping-yang in Korea. Situated in about 38 deg. 40 min. North latitude, it is almost beyond the reach of the monsoons, and produces all the temperate cereals and fruits. Unlike China, the soil is fortile and has not been exhausted by a long course of over laborious cultivation; the population is confined within reasonable limits, and the climate good. Under these circumstances a large trade, mainly in pulse, has of late years been springing up with the southern Chinese ports. The city of Ping-yang itself, situated some sixty miles from the sea is too far to be readily accessible by large vessels, but one or two firstclass anchorages exist some thirty miles lower down, which are perfectly safe and accessible at all states of the tide. Like the rest of the west coast of Korea, the adjacent sea is thickly set with islands of all sizes from a haycock to forty or lifty miles in circumference, and these islands are as yet unsurveyed. No difficulty has been experienced in discovering passages through them, though, of course, till surveyed some degree of risk will always attach to the entrance. The same might, however, have been said of Chemulpo and Mokpo till recently, though now no peculiar difficulty is experienced in threading through the hundreds of islands which make the approach to the former port so picturesque. It might naturally be supposed that Ping-yang remained closed on account of some jealous feeling on behalf of the Korean Government towards foreigners in general. So far is this, however, from being the case, that the Korean Government has expressed its desire to open the port. In the present condition of Korean finance, this is but natural, as there is little doubt that not only would the opening of the port tend to attract foreign commerce to Korea, but the Customs duce at Ping-yang would in all probability be found at least to equal that at all the other ports now open. China, with that after selfishness which at all times leads her to sacrifice to her own immediate ends the interests of all depending on her, is in fact at the bottom of the difficulty. As a fact, Chinese trade in carrying pulse from Ping-yang, and Mr. W. V. Drummond writes as follows to the with the true instinct of the nation, are preedy N. C. Government appropriations "for encouraging immigration," amounting this year to some 86,000,000. The effect is seen in the opening of banks, the building already of nearly a thousand miles of new railroads, the development of com-merce and other industries, and such a general promotion of public interests as never was dreamed of in the old slave plantation days.
